LET US HOPE THIS IS TRUE

New dispatches during the past few days say that Dr. George Kirkpatrick of Portland has succeeded in perfecting a serum to cure tuberculosis in cattle. Tests conducted over a long period of time appear to bear out his contention. If this is true it is of immense importance to the West and to the world. It means a higher return for dairymen and cattle raisers, increased safety for everybody.

Of late years human tuberculosis has been held in check. It is not the scourge it was, but to date no specific cure has been found for it, although there have been plenty of claims. Better living conditions and education have done much to stem its ravages and remove the terror of the disease.

The cure of tuberculosis is one of the most important jobs facing the medical men and research workers of the world. If Dr. Kirkpatrick has succeeded in compounding a cure for tubercular cattle it is a long step in the right direction. Let us hope the dispatches from Portland are true.

MODERN FINANCIAL STABILITY

Time was when the passing of a financial giant or the individual action of a great leader brought about a panic or financial upheaval, but present-day business is vastly more important to be swayed by one man's rule, and the business of the nation is so system and as huge Stinson controlled industry in Germany. With a division of responsibility greater balance has been secured, and nowadays the passing of a financial giant does not shake the confidence of modern business.

In the past two weeks this has been strikingly emphasized on at least two occasions. The first was when the President's "insider" announced that he would not again be a candidate for the presidency of the United States. The second was when the death of Judge H. Gary, head of the United States Steel corporation, was announced. The market was not unduly disturbed on either occasion, which is another illustration of the fact that today changes of leadership are very seldom inconvenient to nations, corporations or industries.

OLD AGE PENSIONS

Within a few weeks old age pensions will be in force in British Columbia, and people residing in that province who are over 70 years of age, and with an annual income under $265, will receive a pension of $20 a month. Half the necessary money will be paid by the province and half by the Dominion. British nationality and domicile in Canada must be established before pensions are paid, the regulations calling for 20 years' residence in Canada and 10 years' residence in British Columbia.

Although the federal government passed the necessary legislation some time ago leaving it to the various provinces to pass their own enabling legislation which would permit of their residents receiving the pension scheme, British Columbia is the only province so far that has made any arrangements with the Dominion government. In this respect the province on the Pacific has again set a standard of social legislation for other provinces of the Dominion to follow, as in the case of the Light House and Minimum Wage act.

This action on the part of the British Columbia government will have a far-reaching effect on old age pensions in other provinces is certain. The matter was brought up by Labor representatives at the last session of the Dominion legislature, when they pressed for action by the provincial government so that the act pending at Ottawa could be taken advantage of, as soon as it was passed. Premier Bennett, however, declined to act, holding that no great deal would result if the legislature waited to see just what the act passed by the federal government entailed before making a decision. There was only one inclination in some quarters to regard the matter of old age pensions as a purely federal one, with the whole cost borne by the Dominion.

The action of the British Columbia government in accepting the act passed at Ottawa and putting the pension into effect will undoubtedly revive the issue at the next session of the Alberta legislature. That pensions are a necessity can be judged from the fact that there are already 2500 applications for pensions on file. In the office of the Workmen's Compensation Board, which acts as the intermediary, the scheme is British Columbia. The number, it is expected, will be increased now that it is known the board is ready for business.

While the $20 pension is not large, and the act as it exists is not perfect, Hon. Peter Hoeman, minister of labor in the federal government, who completed the arrangements by which the scheme is to be put into operation in British Columbia, stated that it was the best that could be obtained at the time it was passed. The scheme is largely an experiment, and its operation in British Columbia will be watched with interest.

It is pointed out that if it works out well, and the payment of the pension does not prove the great strain on the country, the act may be amended, and the pension increased. Labor men favor a 60-year age limit and a minimum of $20 a month, but they will doubtless accept the present scheme as a step in the right direction.

The principle of old age pensions for those who have given of the best that is in them to the up-building of Canada and who, in the future, have been unable to pay a sufficient sum to help make the twilight of their lives free from anxiety and want, is one that should find warm sympathies.

Slumber Song

By EDGAR A. GUEST

It's against the modern method now to sing a lullaby—
We must put the little darling down and let her have her cry.
And the fishermen may go to sea,
And watch the stars shine merrily
And cast their nets in waters deep
While baby cries herself to sleep.
The mother mustn't rock her babe and croon a little
That sweet and lovely lullaby hour is absolutely
So let the dream ship slip away
To find the port where fairy play
And let the shepherds watch their sheep
While baby cries herself to sleep.
It was the good old lullaby which lulled you and me,
They smiled as when they lay in it as all can plainly see.
Instead of hearing pretty tunes
Of sugar plums and pink balloons
They should have scored such a music cheap
And let us cry ourselves to sleep.

Baiting Corporations

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A change has come over the dreams of many politicians. It used to be popular to bait corporations. It appeals to the Bolshevistic notions of the hangers-on to despotic regimes, those who have many public men take delight in shaking the alleged useless money power. Now, says Mr. Crane, financial writer, both Democrats and Republicans in Congress are lining up in favor of a reduction in taxes.

These gentlemen propose to give back to the corporations more than half of the last year's surplus of $420,000,000, to reduce the corporation taxes from 12 1/2 to 10 per cent.

Why? It is slowly seeping into the minds of the people that this corporation tax is merely money taken by the corporation to the consumer. It is really not an affliction to the corporation, but it raises the price of goods for the man who buys them.

Another factor is that the great American corporations are becoming more and more owned by the people. For instance, the American Telephone Company has 400,000 shareholders and the United States Steel Corporation 140,000. This represents a considerable number of votes.

The idea of taxing extravagantly rich men and corporations is absurd. Most men get rich and most corporations prosper only by serving the people. No effort to board money and money at upon it has been long successful. Money must grow as well as mere it is worth less.

A tax therefore upon the money class means an indirect tax upon the people.

It means to mulct the man who works and saves money for the benefit of the multitude who will not work.

Why should thrift and savings be penalized for the sake of the few? The thing that has made this country rich and powerful is the combination of capital and labor, the business organizations, and the more these are encouraged the more they are benefited the better it is for the country.

Men who make much money are perfectly willing to pay a reasonable amount for the support of the Government, but they very properly object to being asked money for being successful.

Thomas N. McCarter, of the New Jersey Public Trust Corporation, said: "Most men get rich and most corporations prosper only by serving the people. No effort to board money and money at upon it has been long successful. Money must grow as well as mere it is worth less."

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY
Diet Specialist and Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions on Health and Diet answered by Dr. McCoy, when addressed in care of The Edmonton Bulletin.

THREE CAUSES OF TUBERCULOSIS

The bacillus of tuberculosis is usually found in the sputum of patients suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, but with many well-advanced cases it has often been impossible to find any trace of this bacilli which is so commonly said as the cause of tuberculosis. The fact that it is not always present should show us that the infection with this germ is not the primary cause of tuberculosis.

One in every ten deaths in the United States may be attributed to this disease, and although the death rate is decreasing each year, there is still an appalling needless loss of life from a disease which could be easily prevented if the fundamental causes were better understood.

From practical experience in diagnosing and treating thousands of cases of pulmonary tuberculosis, I, Dr. Frank McCoy, have been forced to the conclusion that there are only three important underlying causes of this disease. I will mention them in order of their importance.

Every Tubercular Patient Has a Tight, Almost Immovable Diaphragm

The diaphragm is a flat muscle separating the chest from the abdomen, and it is with this muscle that we do all of our breathing. As the diaphragm expands and contracts, the air is drawn in and forced out of the lungs. The lower ribs should open up and expand at inhalation, and be able to depress and contract at exhalation. This action of the chest, the diaphragm and the lower ribs is essential to the proper functioning of the lungs.

Any disease which interferes with this action of the chest, the diaphragm and the lower ribs is a disease which is a threat to the life of the patient. Such a disease is called a "tight diaphragm" and it is the most common cause of tuberculosis.

Such weakness may be caused entirely by lack of exercise, and can be prevented by the use of calisthenics. Weakness may also be caused by any other derangement of physical culture, and it is the most common cause of tuberculosis.

Exercise Always Precedes the State of Tuberculosis. Such weakness may be caused entirely by lack of exercise, and can be prevented by the use of calisthenics. Weakness may also be caused by any other derangement of physical culture, and it is the most common cause of tuberculosis.

The diaphragm is a flat muscle separating the chest from the abdomen, and it is with this muscle that we do all of our breathing. As the diaphragm expands and contracts, the air is drawn in and forced out of the lungs. The lower ribs should open up and expand at inhalation, and be able to depress and contract at exhalation. This action of the chest, the diaphragm and the lower ribs is essential to the proper functioning of the lungs.

Any disease which interferes with this action of the chest, the diaphragm and the lower ribs is a disease which is a threat to the life of the patient. Such a disease is called a "tight diaphragm" and it is the most common cause of tuberculosis.

Murderer Writes Farewell Note Then Suicides

TOLEDO, Aug. 22.—SAYS

Rock, Hudson, about 40 years of age, last night shot and killed himself with a revolver.

Rock shot first at Mrs. Med. He then turned on his wife and shot her dead. He then turned on himself and shot himself dead.

Before shooting himself, Rock wrote a note to his wife and placed it in the drawer of his room. When interpreted, it was said the note said, "I am sorry I did this to you. I am sorry I did this to you. I am sorry I did this to you."

EDMONTON WELCOMES DELEGATES

43rd Annual Convention Trades and Labor Congress of Canada

RETROSPECT OF THE EDMONTON TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

On December 2nd, 1905, a meeting was held in Unity Hall, composed of representatives from the Plumbers', Typographical, Lathers', Brick Layers' and Carpenters' Unions, their purpose being the formation of a central labor body for the city of Edmonton. At this meeting J. A. Kinney was unanimously elected to the chair, whilst William M. Leonard was chosen as the first recording secretary. It was at this meeting that it was decided to organize the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council, and at a subsequent meeting held on the 18th of December, 1905, the following trades unions were elected as officers: J. A. Kinney, president; W. West, vice-president; W. Leonard, recording secretary; W. H. Gaul, financial secretary-treasurer; and J. H. Finester, guard, to carry out the policy agreed upon at the first regular meeting.

Establish a Mutual Federation of Trades and Labor, and "To adjust difficulties arising between employees and employers in the different trades." The motto of the body being based on the broad human principle that "An Injury to One is the Concern of All."

So that for more than 20 years there has continued activity by the trades unionists in an endeavor to bring about better social conditions amongst the wage workers of the community, taking on the aspect of an examination into the workings of the several industries with a view of offering advice as to improvements towards better sanitation and more hygienic methods of carrying on work in industrial institutions, of suggesting that safety appliances be placed on unfenced machinery and shafting, and of further explaining that it is neither advantageous to human beings nor good for the industry to have working conditions that are not right.

It is assumed by many people that trades unionists are individuals in the sense that they seek only to obtain better wages and working conditions for themselves. This would be true if there were no other workers, but trades unionists in the land. Let us take another glimpse at the efforts of the trades unionists of this city through its central labor body. In the year 1908 we find the Trades Council interested in having a "Fair Wage" clause inserted in all civic contracts, thereby guaranteeing wages and hours commensurate with decent living conditions for all. Ever watchful of the interests of the community we find the Convention opens at 10 o'clock in Memorial Hall, Monday, August 22.

WELCOME TO CONVENTION DELEGATES

A. Farnilo, President Trades and Labor Council

WELCOME TO CITY

Mayor A. U. G. Bury

Acting Premier Hon. Geo. Hoadley

ADDRESS

Hon. Peter Heenan, Federal Minister of Labor

Following the address Pres. A. Farnilo will turn the Convention over to Tom Moore, President of the Congress, who will reply to addresses of welcome, after which Credential Committee will make report and announcements will be made.

Trades Council in April, 1911, opposing the bringing in of immigrants in the shape of artisans for the building trades. Efforts were at once put forward by the Trades Council to give a true account of conditions as existing.

As we have come along through the years the influence and power of the Trades Council for the community has grown. In 1917 we find it formulating a policy to have the Provincial Government extend the franchise to tenants of the city, it being thought that a monster petition could be obtained and presented to the Government, to influence them to grant this much needed reform. We might here say that these amendments were eventually secured, being introduced by the attorney general at that time.

What effect does the conveying of these influences have now upon the city council, upon the government and upon the employer? It brings to their attention the need for greater freedom on the part of the working people.

Now, this brings us to another important piece of legislation which the activities of the trades unionists had grown to such proportions that the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council decided to employ a permanent official, and at the final meeting in January, 1918, A. Farnilo was chosen unanimously for the office, the work then taking the definite shape of assisting in drawing trade agreements and adjusting difficulties arising between employer and employee.

ed and at the same time efforts were made to secure a workmen's compensation act. An act providing for workmen's compensation was enacted in 1919, which provided for compensation against injury and death, $150 being the maximum amount payable in case of permanent disability or death.

Today we have an act and its enactment a few years ago was a positive advance resulting from the efforts of organized labor, which secured for Alberta this piece of social legislation of a modern type.

This brings the Council's activities, to date. It will not be our policy to endeavor to state the work that many trades unionists set out to accomplish more than 20 years ago, and which has been carried further along the high road to freedom by those who have followed in their footsteps. Much other legislation has been brought forward, which has had the effect of bettering wages and working conditions.

In 1918 the activities of the trades unionists had grown to such proportions that the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council decided to employ a permanent official, and at the final meeting in January, 1918, A. Farnilo was chosen unanimously for the office, the work then taking the definite shape of assisting in drawing trade agreements and adjusting difficulties arising between employer and employee.

When we state that at the present time there are some 40 trade unions affiliated with the Council, these covering almost every line of human endeavor, one will readily see the increased activity and work arising out of the various difficulties that have in the met by the trade unionists from time to time.

With central headquarters in the Telephone building, 100th Street, there is no failure on the part of the trades unionists, through the trades council, to give real service to the community. Whether it be through endeavoring to assist in securing labor legislation who can fill the bill, or suggesting some needed change in legislation for the betterment of the situation.

The efforts of the history of Edmonton Trades and Labor Council activities chronicle great progress in industrial and social conditions and shows organized labor in the line of progress from past and present in the interests of the masses. We will all at it, and intend to keep it, knowing as we do the need for our service, and for the service that organized labor renders there is no alternative. If we don't do it, it won't be done. What then?
